THOMAS EDISON

Thomas Alva Edison (1847 – 1931) was an American inventor and businessman who developed many devices which greatly influenced life in the 20th century. Dubbed "The Wizard of Menlo Park" by a newspaper reporter, he was one of the first inventors to apply the principles of mass production to the process of invention, and can therefore be credited with the creation of the first industrial research laboratory. Some of the inventions credited to him were not completely original, but alterations of earlier patents (most famously the light bulb), or were actually the work of his numerous employees. Never the less, Edison is considered one of the most prolific inventors in history, holding 1,093 U.S. patents in his name, as well as many patents in the United Kingdom, France, and Germany.

Thomas Edison began his career as an inventor in Newark, New Jersey, with the automatic repeater and other improved telegraphic devices, but the invention which first gained Edison fame was the phonograph in 1877.

The phonograph was developed as a result of Thomas Edison's work on two other inventions, the telegraph and the telephone. In 1877, Edison was working on a machine that would transcribe telegraphic messages through indentations on paper tape, which could later be sent over the telegraph repeatedly. This development led Edison to speculate that a telephone message could also be recorded in a similar fashion. He experimented with a diaphragm which had an embossing point and was held against rapidly-moving paraffin paper. The speaking vibrations made indentations in the paper. Edison later changed the paper to a metal cylinder with tin foil wrapped around it. The machine had two diaphragm-and-needle units, one for recording, and one for playback. When one would speak into a mouthpiece, the sound vibrations would be indented onto the cylinder by the recording needle in a vertical (or hill and dale) groove pattern. Edison gave a sketch of the machine to his mechanic, John Kreusi, to build, which Kreusi supposedly did within 30 hours. Edison immediately tested the machine by speaking the nursery rhyme into the mouthpiece, "Mary had a little lamb." To his amazement, the machine played his words back to him.

Edison took his new invention to the offices of Scientific American in New York City and showed it to staff there. As the Dec. 22, 1877, issue reported, "Mr. Thomas A. Edison recently came into this office, placed a little machine on our desk, turned a

AD1. Thomas Alva Edison (1847-1931), considered the greatest Inventor in history. His formal education lasted only three months. He was home schooled by his Mother at the age of 9, she bought him a chemistry book. That began his interest in Chemistry and testing experiments. As a youth he sold newspapers and snacks on the Grand Trunk Railway. While aboard the train he conducted chemical experiments. He took out patents for an improved stock ticker, a telegraph device used to report the price of gold to brokers' offices. In 1876, he moved his laboratory to Menlo Park, NJ. In 1879, he made commercially practicable the incandescent lamp, but did not invent it. Other inventions included the kinoscope, ore-mill machinery, the storage battery, and dictating machine. He invented the phonograph, his personal favorite and his greatest single achievement from the viewpoint of inventive imagination. In 1888, he founded the Edison Phonograph Works. This exceptional New Jersey stock is dated 1920 and is issued to his son and key assistant Charles Edison. The Edison umbrella signature as President is barely affected by the tiny hole cancellations. Also signed at back by Charles Edison who transfers this stock representing 248 44/100ths Shares. Edison's private secretary, H. F. Miller signs as Treasurer. An Exceptional Example! $3,200 crank, and the machine inquired as to our health, asked how we liked the phonograph, informed us that it was very well, and bid us a cordial good night." Interest was great, and the invention was reported in several New York newspapers, and later in other American newspapers and magazines.

The Edison Speaking Phonograph Co. was established on Jan. 24, 1878, to exploit the new machine by exhibiting it. Edison received $10,000 for the manufacturing and sales rights and 20% of the profits. As a novelty, the machine was an instant success, but was difficult to operate except by experts, and the tin foil would last for only a few playings.

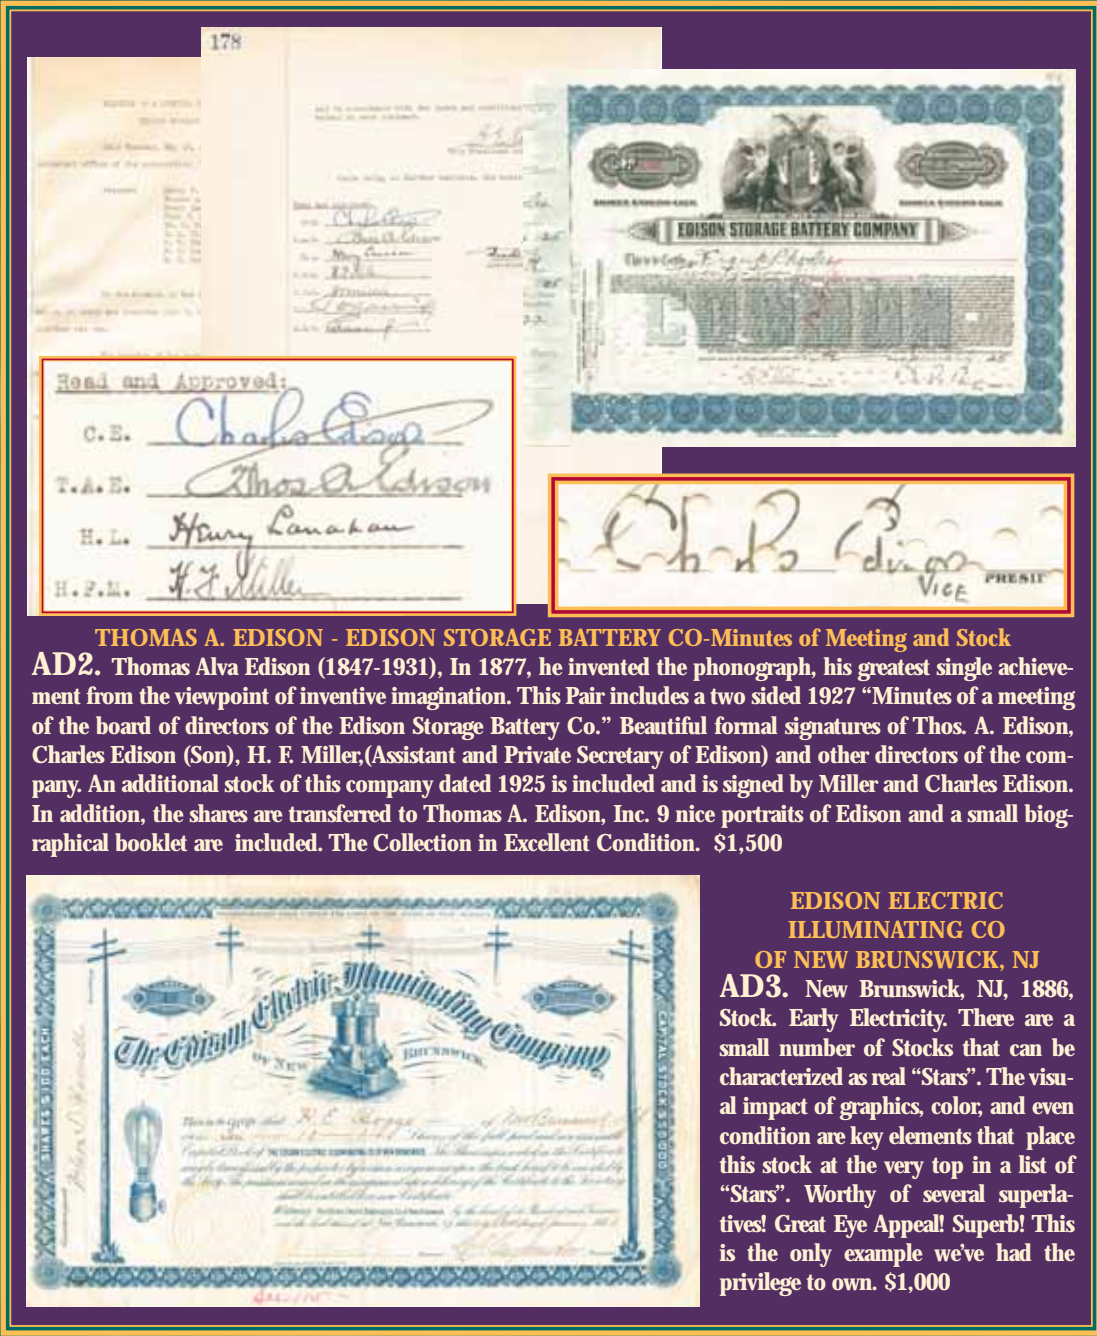

Eventually, the novelty of the invention wore off for the public, and Edison did no further work on the phonograph for a while, concentrating instead on inventing the incandescent light bulb.

In 1881 Thomas Edison noticed Samuel Insull who at the time was working for Edison's business representative in London. Edison offered Insull a job as his personal secretary, and Insull immigrated to the United States. In the decade that followed Insull took on increasing responsibilities in Edison's business endeavors, building electrical power stations throughout the United States. With several other Edison associates he founded Edison General Electric, which later became the publicly held company General Electric.

In the void left by Edison, others moved forward to improve the phonograph. In 1880, Alexander Graham Bell won the Volta Prize of $10,000 from the French government for his invention of the telephone. A patent was awarded to C. Bell and Tainter on May 4, 1886. The machine was exhibited to the public as the graphophone. Bell and Tainter had representatives approach Edison to discuss a possible collaboration on the machine, but Edison refused and determined to improve the phonograph himself. At this point, he had succeeded in making the incandescent lamp and could now resume his work on the phonograph. His initial work, though, closely followed the improvements made by Bell and Tainter, especially in its use of wax cylinders, and was called the New Phonograph.

The Edison Phonograph Co. was formed on Oct. 8, 1887, to market Edison's machine. He introduced the Improved Phonograph by May of 1888, shortly followed by the Perfected Phonograph. The first wax cylinders Edison used were white and made of ceresin, beeswax, and stearic wax.

Businessman Jesse H. Lippincott assumed control of the phonograph companies by becoming sole licensee of the American Graphophone Co. and by purchasing the Edison Phonograph Co. from Edison. In an arrangement which eventually included most other phonograph makers as well, he formed the North American Phonograph Co. on July 14, 1888. Lippincott saw the potential use of the

THOMAS A. EDISON - EDISON STORAGE BATTERY CO-Minutes of Meeting and Stock AD2. Thomas Alva Edison (1847-1931), In 1877, he invented the phonograph, his greatest single achievement from the viewpoint of inventive imagination. This Pair includes a two sided 1927 "Minutes of a meeting of the board of directors of the Edison Storage Battery Co." Beautiful formal signatures of Thos. A. Edison, Charles Edison (Son), H. F. Miller, (Assistant and Private Secretary of Edison) and other directors of the company. An additional stock of this company dated 1925 is included and is signed by Miller and Charles Edison. In addition, the shares are transferred to Thomas A. Edison, Inc. 9 nice portraits of Edison and a small biographical booklet are included. The Collection in Excellent Condition. $1,500

EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING CO OF NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ AD3. New Brunswick, NJ, 1886, Stock. Early Electricity. There are a small number of Stocks that can be characterized as real "Stars". The visual impact of graphics, color, and even condition are key elements that place this stock at the very top in a list of "Stars". Worthy of several superlatives! Great Eye Appeal! Superb! phonograph only in the business field and leased the phonographs as office dictating machines to various member companies which each had its own sales territory. Unfortunately, this business did not prove to be very profitable, receiving significant opposition from stenographers.

In the fall of 1890, Lippincott fell ill and lost control of the North American Phonograph Co. to Edison, who was its principal creditor. Edison changed the policy of rentals to outright sales of the machines, but changed little else.

Edison increased the entertainment offerings on his cylinders, which by 1892 were made of a wax known among collectors today as "brown wax." Although called by this name, the cylinders could range in color from off-white to light tan to dark brown. An announcement at the beginning of the cylinder would typically indicate the title, artist, and company.

In 1894, Edison declared bankruptcy for the North American Phonograph Co., a move that enabled him to buy back the rights to his invention. It took two years for the bankruptcy affairs to be settled before Edison could move ahead with marketing his invention. The Edison Spring Motor Phonograph appeared in 1895, even though technically Edison was not allowed to sell phonographs at this time because of the bankruptcy agreement. In Jan. 1896, he started the National Phonograph Co. which would manufacture phonographs for home entertainment use. Within three years, branches of the company were located in Europe. He announced the Spring Motor Phonograph in 1896, followed by the Edison Home Phonograph, and he began the commercial issue of cylinders under the new company's label. A year later, the Edison Standard Phonograph was manufactured, and then exhibited in the press in 1898. This was the first phonograph to carry the Edison trademark design. Prices for the phonographs had significantly diminished from its early days of $150 (in 1891) down to $20 for the Standard model and $7.50 for a model known as the Gem, introduced in 1899.

In 1910, the company was reorganized into Thomas A. Edison, Inc. Frank L. Dyer was initially president, then Edison served as president from 1912-26, when his son, Charles, became president, and Thomas Edison became chairman of the board. His son Charles was President from 1927-59.

Columbia Phonograph Co. was originally the local company distributing and selling Edison phonographs and phonograph cylinders in Washington, DC, Maryland and Delaware. Columbia severed its ties to Edison and the North American Phonograph Co. in 1893, and became Edison's chief competitor. In 1912, Columbia Phonograph Co., abandoned the cylinder market. The U.S. Phonograph Co. ceased production of its U.S. Everlasting cylinders in 1913, leaving the cylinder market to Edison. The Edison Co. did not desert its faithful cylinder customers, until its demise in 1929.

THE THOMAS A. EDISON, JR., AND WILLIAM HOLZER STEEL AND IRON
PROCESS CO
AD12. Company developed a method of steel processing that Thomas A. Edison, Jr. created with his uncle, William Holzer. Holzer had worked for Thomas Edison in the Menlo Park laboratory 20 years earlier. Although Bethlehem Steel Company expressed some interest, the process was never adopted and the company collapsed in litigation. Thomas A. Edison, Jr. was born in 1876 to Edison's first wife, Mary Stilwell. He was not an achiever like his father. Although he tried to capitalize on his name, his ventures always ended in failure. His father was not happy with his use of his famous name in failed ventures so on June 8, 1903 Thomas A. Edison signed an agreement with his son Thomas A. Edison, Jr., whereby the younger Edison would not use his own name in any business enterprise in exchange for a weekly allowance of $35. This West Virginia Incorporated company is dated 1902, Uncanceled and quite attractive. Only 1 piece was found. Most interesting and important! $350

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD-WHOLESALE

Perhaps no other industry in the history of America captures the adventurous spirit embodied in capitalism quite like that of the railroad. The completion of the Northern Pacific as America's second trans-continental railroad offers no better example of the triumph of the entrepreneurial spirit in the face of overwhelming odds. In 1864, President Abraham Lincoln signed into law the Northern Pacific's charter making it the beneficiary of the largest government railroad land grant in American history. This grant would eventually include over forty million acres and a vast extinguishment of Indian land titles. The original incorporators, led by the tireless advocate Josiah Perham, set out to link Lake Superior to Puget Sound. It would take nearly twenty years and countless heartaches and setbacks until the final spike completing the line was ceremoniously driven on September 8, 1883 fifty-five miles west of Helena, Montana.

FREDERICK BILLINGS

"Billings was honored by a resolution that authorized placing an engraved portrait on the company's stock certificates. He accepted the compliment, declaring the reconstruction of the Northern Pacific to be 'one of the most gratifying events of my life'."

Northern Pacific Railroad Stocks Dated 1876-97

ADNP1. Bearing the engraved portrait of Frederick Billings, the certificates of the Northern Pacific provide a wonderful example of the art of intaglio printing in the 19th century done by American or National Bank Note Co. $25 Each or 10 Pieces $175

ADNP2. A great set offering both preferred and common varieties. Each stock has the stub over the left border. Set of 5 Colors $75 or 5 Sets $300

JAY COOKE

The nation was slowly healing its wounds and recovering from the disastrous effects of the Civil War. Visionaries of the period looked to the future and the opportunities available in a recovering nation's expansion. Naturally so, men of stout hearts looked west. Thus, it is no surprise that the man who successfully orchestrated the Union effort in selling bonds to finance the war turned his eye toward his next great challenge, the resurrection of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Jay Cooke arrived on the scene, successfully lobbying Congress for legislative change which would facilitate his grand plan for financing the construction of the road. Rising costs necessitated the need for constantly growing amounts of capital and Jay Cooke boldly took the lead. Ultimately, with Jay Cooke & Company's fortunes closely tied to the Northern Pacific Project, the firm failed and was forced into bankruptcy and in some part, contributed to the onset of the financial panic of 1873.

ADNP5. Jay Cooke Signed Stock, 1870's $600

ADNP6. Same but signed by both Jay Cooke and Jay Cooke, Jr. $700

SAINT PAUL & DULUTH RR

Originally incorporated in 1863 and known as the Lake Superior and Mississippi Railroad, the road provided the first service between Duluth and the Twin Cities upon its completion in 1870. Serving as the all-important eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, the road linked the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River. A victim of the panic of 1873, the company defaulted on its bonds and was reorganized in 1877 as the Saint Paul & Duluth Railroad. It was absorbed by the Northern Pacific in 1900. These exceptional stocks are beautifully printed by American Bank Note Company. The two Steamships and Locomotive scenes are so very impressive. A fine example of engraving of this Golden Era of Financial Printing.

GERMAN OLYMPIC YEARBOOKS

AD233. 1932 Los Angeles Summer Olympics. The 1932 Summer Olympics, officially known as the Games of the Xth Olympiad, were held in Los Angeles. No other cities made a bid to host these Olympics. Due to the Depression many nations and athletes were unable to pay for the trip to Los Angeles. Half the number of participants from the 1928 Summer Olympics in Amsterdam competed in 1932. Published in German by Altona-Bahrenfeld, Germany Reemtsma Cigarettenfabriken (a German Cigarette/Tobacco Co.) 1932, 9 1/2" x 12 1/2", hardbound blue cloth covers with gold Olympic rings, 142 pp. plus color fold-out graph of standings by country. Most importantly is the extensive collection (100+) of large black & white and color pasted labels that were acquired as premiums from the cigarette company. The collection is complete and is in Excellent Condition. Rare! $350

BERLIN OLYMPIC YEARBOOKS, VOLUME I & II

AD234. Volume I, the 1936 Winter Olympics (IVth Olympic Winter Games) were in Bavaria, Germany. A military patrol competition was held. The International Olympic Committee refused admission of this sport into the Olympic Program, but the expressed desires of Adolf Hitler forced the IOC to make this program a demonstration sport. This volume also includes coverage of the history of each Olympic Game since 1896 in Athens. Also, a large portion (60 or so pages) of this volume deals with the Berlin Summer Games. Volume II, the 1936 Summer Olympics (Games of the XIth Olympiad) were held in Berlin, Germany. Awarded before the Nazi Party came to power in Germany. The Berlin Olympics also saw the introduction to the ceremonies of the Olympic Torch bringing the Olympic Flame by relay from Olympia. While Germany dominated the games, the many triumphs by citizens of other nations were seen as a rebuke to racist Nazi philosophies. In particular, the black sprinter and long jumper Jesse Owens (pictured above with Helen Stephens) won four gold medals. Published by Altona-Bahrenfeld, Cigaretten-Bilderdienst, (1936), 9 1/2" x 12 1/2" 165 pp. Bright hardbound Blue Cloth. Illustrated with 200 mounted b/w photos plus 8 full page plates (some colored). "Choice" Rare! The Two Volumes. $650

AD234a. Volume One only, as above covering both German Winter and Summer Olympics. $350

WORLD'S FAIR

CRYSTAL PALACE EXHIBITION - 1851
AD235. Ad Sheet, 13 x 11^{5/8}", London, England, 1851, Award for Peppermint Oil. The Great Exhibition, also known as the Crystal Palace Exhibition, was a big international exhibition held in Hyde Park London, 1851 and the first in a series of World's Fair exhibitions of culture and industry that were to be a popular 19th century feature. A special building, nicknamed The Crystal Palace made of cast iron and glass, was designed to house the show which was an enormous success. Printer-Geo. Schlegel, NY. This is an Ad Sheet of the 19th Century (likely 1870's or so) possibly used for wrapping or promoting a product. Fresh Choice Condition. $65

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION CO
AD243. NY, 1900, Stock. 500 Shares printed by Sies & Co., Buffalo, NY. The exposition is most remembered because U.S. President William McKinley was shot by an anarchist, Leon Czolgosz, on September 6, 1901. The newly-developed X-ray machine was displayed at the fair, but no one thought to use it on McKinley to search for the bullet, which might have saved his life. Also, ironically, the operating room at the exposition's emergency hospital did not have any electric lighting, even though the exteriors of many of the buildings were covered with thousands of light bulbs. Doctors used a pan to reflect sunlight onto the operating table as they treated McKinley's wounds. The stock has a minor light stain at the bottom margin but has good eye appeal. A very popular stock. $500
